

Orlando: Fast City

Orlando: Best City for Innovation

Orlando, Florida is 1 of only 3 U.S. cities (the others are Seattle and Kansas City) named to Fast Company magazine's list of 12 "Fast Cities". The magazine identifies these locations as "nodes of creativity and innovation," notable among places around the globe that are thriving.

Here's what Fast Company editors had to say about Orlando: "It's a hub for two burgeoning industries: interactive games – a lively scene has sprouted around the Electronic Arts studio behind Madden NFL – and biotech. A new medical complex in the Lake Nona area will house a University of Central Florida med school and a branch of the famed Burnham Institute for Medical Research."

In addition to the U.S. cities noted, other "fast cities" included: Beijing, Hyderabad, Mexico City, Kigali, Calgary, Moscow, Barcelona, Doha and Abu Dhabi.
Congratulations Orlando!
